THE business of Mesars, John F. Co., Public Tea Inspectors of sion Agents, at this Port, has been to the undersigned, who will cont. in his own name from this date. once a week. In 1859 eighty-four of the live named bureaux took cognizance 1.43,689 disputes; they arranged 25,863 satisfactorily, 2,691 were withdrawn by the contending parties, and 7,535 were left for settlement to the hureaux generaux.

M. Jules Simon has called attention to certain defects in the present constitution of these councils which would seem to require reform. Since the suppression of articles 415 and 416 of the penal code, which occurred some time ago, there has been a great increase in the number. of trade disputes, and in consequence there are more opportunities, and imless necessity, for the exercise of the jurisdiction of these courts, hose for Paris act not only for Paris, where alone there were in 1860 550,280 ouvriers, but for the whole department of the Scine. Yet they are only four in number, and, since every trade is represented in this city, the prodiction find themselves judges in disputes. of which they have no technical knowledge, or that they are employers or workmen in some opposing branch of industry. It is argued, therefore, that the number of the councils ought to receive a considerable addition. Then, again, there is the question of pay. By law the patrons, give their services gratuitously, and it is left. optional to give the ourriers indemnity or otherwise. At Lyons the latter receive a sum of about £40 annually; at Ronen, Nantes. Rou-bair. Elbouf, and Nancy they are likewise paid. It seems obviously unfair that men who depend or their bread on their duily labours should be Prefet of the Seine has accordingly proposed that they should in future receive five frames for each sitting of the court. But a difficulty has arisen in respect of this which will sound oddly in English care. The Paris prud'hommes ouvriers, "animated by a sentiment of legiciante pride," refuse to accept it unless the patrons receive the same amount, and this not from generosity to the patrons, but in order that there may be preserved an apparent equality. We say apparent because though they may both receive the same wages in the shape of the five france, not even the lawcan alter the fact that one man is rich and does not require it, and that the other is poor and cannot do without it. Morcover, since the expenses fall on the local taxes, which, of course, are partly paid by the poor, this sentimental pride may be legitimate, but scarcely appears considerate or judicious.

As the law stood originally the prud'hommes patrons were to have one more representative in the courts than the prind hommes ouvriers, out in 1848 liberty to make the numbers equal was accorded, and a provision was afterwards introduced that the president, who has a custing vote, and the vice-president should be named by the Emperor, while the profet is to select the secretary. It is not necessary that such president should be chosen from the prud'homenes, and if by accident the president and vice should be absent, their places must be temporarily filled by a patron. It is urged that consequently there is in many cases a majority of two ugainst the ouvriers; that the patrons govern, while the ouvriers only assess and endorse; and that the effect of this arrangement is greatly to shake public confidence in the impartiality of these courts. On the other hand, it is arged the Government use the power wisely, and that in Paris the president is selected alternately from each division, but that in the provinces the onvriers are not soadvanced in intelligence as to fit them to act as presidents. Besides employers and workmon, there are two other classes, namely, foreman and workmen who work on their own account, and for want of classification these are incligible for election. This is an arrangement which might be easily amended. M. Jules Simon also contended that the election of prud'hommes was not anfliciently representative unil. popular, because no ouvrier could vote unless bis "livret" or passbook was en règle, and that this rule should be abolished. The workman's "livret" is a kind of passbook, in which are inscribed the age, residence, and personal description of the ouvrier, with the particulars of apprenticeship, by whom employed, and for how long, together with his character as furnished. by each master. It is naturally not a very po-pular institution among the ouvriers, least of all with the bad ones, though it is in force in Germany and in most of the continental States. except Bolgium. But if it is of any value at all in formishing a good workman with a good character and good references, it is surely valuable as a proof of his fitness for being an elector; whereas, if it is of no use one way, it is of still less use the other, and might judiciously be entirely done away with. By H.M.S Pearl, from Nagosaki on the 28th ultimo, which arrived yesterday, we learn that Captain Swan, of H.M.S. Rattler, died at Yokohama towards the end of last month. It is understood that Admiral Sir H. Keppel's Flag Lieutenant will be promoted to the vicancy. H.M ships Serpent and Saloin, and U.S. ships Ashnelot, Onword, and Idaho were in Nagasaki when the Pearl left. The Idaho is a store-ship. just from the States, and although she was nearly five months on the passage, her log-book shows that during the voyage she has reached ge as high a speed as eighteen and a-half knots un-

Admiral Sir H. Keppel, with H.M S. Rochiey, was expected at Nagasaki on the 29th ultimo. H.M.S. Ocean was still at Osaka. RUMOURED DISTURBANCES IN JAPAN. When the Pearl left Nagasaki there was a report current that fresh disturbances had broken out at Kioto between the Japanese Princes, and that the British troops, numbering 800, were under orders for that place. THE Times is weary at heart on account of the word " awfully which it calls a schoolboyish word. It is, and would like to get rid of it. If so, I why did it and set its face steadily against it at ithe very infancy of the word, ten years ago, and m- then strangle it in the cradle at first? Why of did it not gramble at it with the help editorial to bay? why not have launched thunderholds at it, fre instead of keeping at for the review of an underon graduate's book in the latter days? May we ask, do unitergraduates, who are a grown up sortn of creature after all, really use the word "awfully" in the sense of "very"—"very," rather, in full dress? If one of themselves says so, we suppose they do. Yet it seems more natural for an indergraduate to swear like his consin the trooper than to minue like Miss his sister. The word does not belong to the vocabulary of manhood, nor yet, strictly speaking, to that of by bood either, with all due deference to the Times. It is a schoolgirl's idiom, not a school boy's; and the latter only comes to it by initiation and at second-hand. It is a ken word, · the ben of our fathers' more robust, expletive y "deuged" or " deviliah," just as " fib " is the hen or of " lie," and " poorly " is the hea of " seedy." The word cannot be stopped. It is natural, if not useful, and it supplies a real want, the want s of a tonic force or crutch for weakly old adjectives or other worn out parts of speech to be used as a common form by the youth of both sexes in places where they must, such as the croquet ground and the five o'clock tea. A man would be a firste to quarrel with the klicing of youth upon those occasions, where indeed, youth lia its own best idiom. "There's not a comp is fondness for youth that I have," and we, too, who love youth quite as much as that immortal grammarian, find it a hard thing not to love the n rising generation of slang as well : for slang is n but the riotous boylood of speech.—Pall Mall
